Long long ago, at a remote frontier post, there was a young soldier named Hurnamjr, who came to know a beautiful princess.

Finishing his service and ready to return home, the princess gifted him a black steed to carry him safely on his way.

The majestic stallion was as quick as lightning and the thunderous sound of his hooves kept the wild beasts at bay. The black steed's stride beat Hurnamjr a safe path through the twisted roots and jagged stones.

Harrassed by foes on the road home, the black steed never shirked from battle and delivered him to safety.

Long, long ago there was a black steed?
