

Cassandra

Scotts

He gave to her, yet tenfold claim'd in return -
She hath no life but the one he for her wrought;
Proffer'd to her his wauking heart - she turn'd it down,
Riposted with a tell-tale lore of lies and scorn. Prophetess or fond?,
    Tho' her parle of truth:
    "I ken to-morrow - refell me if ye can!",
    Yet the kiss and breath - Apollo's bane -
        Ser of the future, not of twain,
"Sicker!", quoth Cassandra. Still, is she lief and quaint in his eyne, a sight divine? -
    A mistress fuell'd by his prest haughtiness -
    If he did grant, wherefore then did he not foresee, Belike egal as it to him might be?! Prophetess or fond?,
    Tho' her parle of truth:
    "I ken to-morrow - refell me if ye can!",
    Yet the kiss and breath - Apollo's bane -
        Ser of the future, not of twain,
"Sicker!", quoth Cassandra. 'Or was he an eried being,
    'Or was he weening - alack nay mo;
        Her naysay' raught his heart,
    Her daffing was the grave of all hope -
        She belied her own words,
    He thought her life, save moreo'er scourge,
        She held him august, yet wee;
    He left her ne'er without his heart.
