

Today

David Gilmour

If you should wake and find me gone
Keep safe this night and dwell upon
Such murmurations, sun sunk deep

Now close your eyes and go to sleepWhat a day it's been a day of shoot the breezing
What a day it's been this time of year

Just a day when the weight of the world slides awayFeel that sun on your back see the shadows falling
Sea meets shore and soothes it with a song

If this should be my last day on earth
I'll sing alongLet's forget all the skies cast over and grey
And the squalling tempests of doubt
Holding on clinging tight in the wreckage of love
But todayWhat a time to dream what a day of easy
What a day it's been this time of year

Just a day when the weight of the world slides awayEvening Star, a guitar in the smoke of the fire
Light of gold in the garden of old
I would take it all again, if it came my way
But today
