Creepin

Kingswood

How many times I count the minutes endless digits push the limits and everything that's lost between you and I,
And after all is said and done, don't take a seat it has begun, a little glimmer tells me something is astray, tells me something hasn't changed,cause every night I go to bed I think of you instead of closing my eyes and sleeping, and its your lips I want to taste they, are such a shame to waste, why don't you embrace your creepinHow many lessons have i learned, How many secrets stay unturned, Another feeling tells me somethings gonna change,
The after instance of sudden difference Propels assistance to my resistance While you insist on you and I,every night I go to bed I think of you instead of closing my eyes and sleeping,
and its your lips I want to taste they,
are such a shame to waste, why don't you embrace your creepin but after hours and close to dawn do you go to sleep or be reborn after tonight you've had it all do you let it stand or watch it fall do you lack the force or need the proof do you live in fear or speak the truth are you the one that lights the flame that sets my heart alive againcause every night I go to bed I think of you instead of closing my eyes and sleeping,
and its your lips I want to taste they,
are such a shame to waste, why don't you embrace your creepim creepin im creepin every night I go to bed I think of you instead of closing my eyes and sleeping, and its your lips I want to taste they,
are such a shame to waste, why don't you embrace your creep
