

Shadows (œœOcean Beach" Outtake)

Red House Painters

The coarse and white colored skin
It blends with the state you're in
And the wetness of your eyes
Against a sun that clouds blind You ain't saying nothing that I don't already know
When you say love's dimming light won't shine on tomorrow Chalk white apartment's wall
Surfaces my every flaw
And the naked and the still in here
It brings surreal light into clear You ain't doing nothing that I don't already know
When you hide your sorry head in pillows You fake a strained, sort of grin
That matches the shape you're in
And accept any lies are truth
After the long year that we've been through You ain't saying nothing that I don't already know
When you say life takes turns like fiery shadows
