Love Poems

Bilal

Yo, I've been needing to tell you something tonight
I guess, I was just waiting for the right time, you know
So why don't you sit down?
As we step from across the room
Starting to ponder what we've been going through
What does my kiss mean to you?
Are we just friends or is this more to you?
But if we label this, just picture what we might lose, yes
That unexpected kiss
The whole feeling that brought me to you
Meanwhile my feelings grow, yeah
Grow, feelings grow, grow
But if we label this, just picture what we might lose
That unexpected kiss, that feeling that brought me to you, yes
Why rush, why choose, why risk this thing, and ruin me and you
I want to love her and keep the friend
I wanna be near you and not pretend
But if we label this, just picture what we might lose
That unexpected kiss, the feeling that brought me to you
The whole thing's got me searching
I find myself searching for love poems
Don't know your soul, yet your presence on my brain
Causes my pen to go insane and I wrote these poems
Your sight is few and far between, bringing my soul alive
I find myself probing for love makers, love songs
The love of the universe and my soul
Damn, what's up with my soul?
Empty like theaters at the encores
Lonely like single mothers on the stew
I am lonely and I find myself searching for love poems
I love you and all, I do, but you see
I need him now, I need to live my life
Too young, too young, got to be young
Woah, won't my feelings remain the same?
We could be friends, into ourselves
Oh, can't you hear me out, yeah
Explain this whole thing, explaining this whole thing
Believe me that if we label this, just picture what we might lose, yeah
That unexpected kiss that brought me to you

But if we label this, just picture what we might lose
