...And We're Just Changing

Real Friends

When I heard my parents cry
I realized that we're all lost kids
Trying to find our way home
Blood is thicker than water
And I still feel like everyone I love forgot how to swim
At least there are pictures of my sister and me
Hanging on the wall in my garage
They always give me peace of mind
They always give me peace of mindMaybe this place is the same and we're just changing
I'm starting to see that
We're always changing
It's just so weird to think that we're always changing
I still love you mom and dad
But I feel more at home when I'm away from here
I'll never find anything in this dead place
My heart's been buried in the midwest
And I've been digging out for the past three years
For the past three yearsI never spent my youth thinking of half the shit I'd go through
Living in the past never helped me
Last night I drove past the house that I grew up in
And tried to find that happinessLiving in the past never helped me
Or anyone move forward
There's no love, no growth for me here
Anymore, anymore
I still love you mom and dad
But I feel more at home when I'm away from here
I'll never find anything in this dead place
My heart's been buried in the midwest
And I've been digging out for the past three years
For the past three yearsMaybe this place is the same and we're just changing
I know this place is the same and that I'm changing
And I'm just
