Better In The Long Run

Miranda Lambert

Cheap red wine straight out of a coffee cup
One more down, drink you off my mind
Lord knows I've tried a thousand times to give you up
But its closing time, and we both know why
I'm just too selfish I guess
I know you're tired and restless
It's no surprise we've come undone
But I can't not love you just because
You say it's better in the long run
We've been driving down this highway
Now we're out of gas, too far out of town
Oh and here we are all tangled up and sideways
You're all broken down, yeah I'm breakin down
I'm just too selfish I guess
I know you're tired and restless
It's no surprise we've come undone

But I can't not love you just because
You say it's better in the long run
Oh and maybe somewhere a little down the line
I'll get a little better leaving us behind
Maybe someday, oh I'll be fine
And you'll move on and I will too
But still I don't see gettin over you, oh no
I'm just too selfish I guess
I know you're tired and restless
It's no surprise we've come undone, oh no
But I can't not love you just because
You say it's better in the long run
In the long run
Ooh in the long run
In the long run
In the long run, ooh
