All That We See

Infinite Spectrum

I hear it whisper, feel it tugging at my will This connection that's between us, getting stronger still In bed I lie awake afraid to close my eyes I tell myself it's alright to believe the lies I know that it is waiting, waiting in my dreamsThrough strange worlds walking in my sleep
Visions vague and incomplete
Nightmare phantoms and cold sweat screams
Is all that we see or seem but a dream?I awake in fright, sleep walking through the night
It draws me closer still, yet I struggle and I fight I bind my arms and legs to the bed in which I lay to keep myself from wandering or being led astrayThrough strange worlds walking in my sleep
Visions vague and incomplete
Nightmare phantoms and cold sweat screams
Is all that we see or seem but a dream?Haunted by this thing, it takes me to the brink of mental nervous break, how much can I take?
I make myself a prison of this attic room
I see the knighted moon outside my private tombStrange as any imagining, as if my weird tales came to life
Strange feelings, eyes upon me, a malignant presence I can't describeStrange as any imagining,
as if my weird tales came to life
Strange feelings, eyes upon me, a malignant presence I can't describeMy body not my own, dangling like a puppet on a string Control lost to a monster, this wicked nightmare king It brings me to the church in hazy mist of slumber deep Prodding at my mind to find the secrets that I keepI find the strength to run, I scurry down the spiral stairs Away from church and steeple and away from its dark lair I awake on my own floor with the rising morning sun Bruised and beaten, my mind is numbPulling up memory, pushing back time Remember my hopes before the decline
Live in the past, closing the door

Wish for bright days like they were beforePulling up memory, pushing back time
Remember my hopes before the decline
Can't hide in the past, the wolf's at the door
No more bright days like they were before
