The Lonesome Pine

Michael Trigiani

I close my eyes so I can see the river runs as far as the trees.
The path I choose is long sometimes.
It always leads me back to the lonesome pine.

Way down below around these parts,
they mine the soul but not her heart.
Now theyâ€™re all gone and left behind,
the lasting faith and truth of the Lonesome Pine.

Time after time we run away,
searching for reasons not to stay.
Maybe the answers arenâ€™t that far.
Sometimes youâ€™ll find them
where you are.

Beyond these hills we go astray,
There is a sign that always remains.
Standing alone with all it's might,
the solitude and strength of the Lonesome Pine.
