Vessels

Butch Walker

You said you'd never give in, never pretend That this is just a chapter for you What do we do? I feel like this is war on a hill A Jack and a Jill trying to win a battle or two What we never do is win So now, you hurry it up It's coming at you fast as you can run The silver of a tip of a bullet from a gun Is gonna take you down Take you down and finally kill this love We don't get along anymore Saw his name and number at her door You just take the bed, I'll take the floor We don't get along anymore And there's the look in your eye Magnified a thousand times I see the vessels of blood swelling above The color that made me turn to red When you turned your head At the body we never saw, you went for it all I took you like I never gave you up Not a breath could come between The bodies lying on the car hood I think it says a lot that I remember it all Was it all just wasted love? We don't get along anymore Saw his name and number by the door You just take the bed, I'll take the floor We don't get along anymore We don't get along anymore Saw his name and number by the door You just take the bed, I'll take the floor We don't get along anymore We don't get along anymore Saw his name and number by the door You just take the bed, I'll take the floor We don't get along anymore
