Hey Young London

Bananarama

Hey, young London, you're looking good
Dressing up like you know you should
Hey, young London, you're the brightest star
So you ride about got to get that farWell, I've read your face and seen your place
And you'll let me in if I share your tastes
You know the night spots if you wanna stay hip
Have you flown to Paris, hope you have a good tripWe don't care
You know that we don't care

We don't care

D'you know that we wear flaresHey, young London, you're looking good

The lights are less well that's understood

Hey, young London, take your time and go

The girls are young but they act so oldYou're headin' for the same pub each night
Girls in the corner, boys looking for a fight
Even he might rock each others self control

When you get engaged you know you've reached your goalWe don't care

You know that we don't care

We don't care

D'you know that we wear flaresHey, young London, you're looking good
You got the money you can choose your moods
Hey, young London, you're a bright young thing
Your private houses are a public thingShe's so afraid, she sees a dead still light

And her dress is see-through and his pants on tight With his girl at his side, he doesn't need his breaks

And a smile on his face for all the risks he takesHey, young London, you're looking good

Dressing up like you know you should

Hey, young London, you're the brightest star
So you ride about got to get that farHey, young London, you're looking good
The lights are less well that's understood
Hey, young London, take your time and go
The girls are young but they act so old
Hey, young London, you're looking good

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/