Mirages

The Peach Tree

I could have pushed you out that day
That would have been the easy way
Watch you fly down that hundred meter fall
I wouldn't care at allFalling, falling, drowning
Inhaling and you're screaming
Screaming... Pleading don't goMirages - as I hurt you in my mind
As the memories unwind
Mirages - as you led me to believe
In things that only you conceiveWhy do you play that vicious game
I ask myself most every day
So high, that hundred meter fall
I turn around and there you areFalling, falling, drowning
Inhaling and I'm screaming
Screaming... Pleading... BleedingVictoria falls were much too real
It's beauty false though now I see
Please try to explain
What was the aim, what was the gain
No matter how I try to wash it off
The stains remain(We are gathered here today
To say our last farewells
We fell so hard down that hundred meter fall
Now - only stains of us remain)Mirages - as you twisted with my mind
As you told me I was blind
Mirages - well constructed to deceive
The trusty and naive
Mirages - as you offered no reprieve
From the hell you had achieved
Mirages - as I finally could see
That there was nothing to conceive
