From Cradle to Grave

Glasseater

we are born then we start to experience... with experience we begin to age we grow old we look back into our days growing up then we die i wonder what it would feel like to die with someone or at least something other than yourself when the light in your eyes burn out and you are looking at your life expeditions in rewind... how many times did you go out on a limb to to try and prove what you truly wanted to accomplish (think about that and remember this) we are born alone and we leave this world alone so grab hold of your life and run it dry live life at your fullest capacity leave no stone unturned so when its your time to pass the term regret will bear no consequence risks will make it all work it this will make it all worth it
