

Revelation (So Young)

The Preatures

I've had a revelation
The lost child that forgotten me
Consequences too much
I can't put myself to sleep for the feet
On the edge of my mind
The waves are falling
Rain sliding like a belt of lust.
I wanna leave with you baby
We could get a place just the two of us. So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh
So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh Hear the mind like a mirror
Things pass and they leave no stain
I can see myself carving up
Words in the dust on the window pane
Shooting straight up my spine
I grieve electric
Violent eyes on a violent sea
How do I play in the memory
Of someone only there in the beefest heart? So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh
So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh And I love the passing dark of it
The weight of it touching nothing
Sometimes I wanna creep back into it
But I'm running like a woman straight to you
The force and the blood are dead
Breaking the seal of everything spoken
And I try to mimic the shape
That's taken So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh
So young, so young, so young
So young, Ooh
