

Some Other Day's Swaying Response

Echo Orbiter

Step in former prints; for the sand in between the toes
Languished in some other's shoes, during a soft sunny day
Twas cold instead

A boat floating on a tumultuous sea
Unwire these teeth; translate my A-B-C's
Piece together phrases, for crazies seldom relate
And follow me through spiral currents kicking up sand
Into our eyes blinding a breathtaking view
And discarding us on some sunset island
A stain remains on the face, a ghost of a smile
It wasn't so long ago when we had it alright

Spinning carousel wheel; and illuminous feel
Throw electrical light through a wonderful night
Fancy to twirl in place; haste called in disgrace
How to feel through these trees; unlikely pleased
Hand in hand making rounds from once hand me downs
For such a warm summer night, it's awful cold where I stand
Constant flickering flames reach through round glassy panes
Rise to peak shower down; 20 years breathe this town
Through advice soundly nice, to kill the pulse of this place
I am leaving the same way that I came in
