

Little Brother

The Tallest Man on Earth

Why are you thinking again little brother
When you know there's a story for every wrong
Well I won't be around in the morning
Can only pray there's no harm in me moving on
To the trials in your unknown Now there's a legion of wolves in the forest
And what might have been lost it is there I know
Where the crazy young flames loved an older
I feel useless when I have to face alone
All the trials in my unknown If you could just walk on by
With signs just flying around
And if this storm was just emotion
Of your kid just trying out
If you could only lose these lies Now there's a terrible light on the ceiling
Where you drew your insanity's sum upon
Well I can see where the dark hits the sun
I said I believe you forever where you sit down
It's a trial for all that grows If you could just walk on by
With signs just flying around
And if this storm was just emotion
Of your kid just trying out
If you could only lose these lies Why are you drinking again little brother
When your ramblings the hard part of loving you
You say the creek and the fogs wanna drown you
But there are deeper wells where we're going to There's no drought in this unknown/drowning this unknown If you could just walk on by
With signs just flying around
And if this storm was just emotion
Of your kid just trying out
If you could only lose these lies And when your memory's lost on a hillside
And a wind takes you further forward now
And your world is a kite in the weather
Gently tied to your hand that is pointing out
There's a sky in this unknown If you could just walk on by
With signs just flying around
And if this storm was just emotion
Of your kid just trying out
If you could only lose these lies
