Go to the Woods

Dar Williams

Rambling and rambling, rambling and ramblingIt's the woods, what do you see?
In all the spooky shadows, in the forest of green
Is there a windy path, angry ass woman who will eat you?
Sad eyed lumberjack, savior who will greet you?
It's a different story for you and for me
Go to the woods, go to the woods and seeOut in the storybook land are many leagues of the wild
Wise and uncontainable as a windy haired child
There are the youth truth movements
And they're springing from the ground
Freak flag wavers and you cannot chop them downHey, it's the home of the brave
You'll get the threat of the free
Go to the woods, go to the woods and seeAre you afraid of the woods?
Are you afraid of the woods?
Are you afraid of the woods?
Are you afraid of the woods?And if I was your memory, what would you do?
'Cause you know if you go back in time
There's something waiting for youYou've got your forest path, reading math, dappling of shade
You can just admit it, there's a promise that you made
And you can't have the past back, but you can hold me
Go to the woods, go to the woods and seeI am afraid of the woods
I am afraid of the woods
I am afraid of the woods
I am afraid of the woodsBut what I fear more, what I fear most
More than the man, the beast, or the ghost
Is that the woods are disappearing
So when I go back, when I finally dare
You know the woods'll be gone
You know they just won't be thereRambling and rambling, rambling and rambling
Rambling and rambling
