Awkward As a Drunk

Major Parkinson

Oh, tell me why Iâ€™m to blame for this eager to touch every inch of your body.
Oh, tell me why I was laughing when you fucked up my mind, when you followed me down in the drain.

I love you like the humming of pouring scotch.
Iâ€™m a puppy with a bone when Iâ€™m drinking too much
But Iâ€™m ready for the day when the ship goes down
When they play the violin.
And my mommy and my daddy will be proud of me
When Iâ€™m hanging from the brink of sanity
Patching me up when I break my teeth from the worth I cannot chew.

Ever since elementary school I was dating different girls
But none of them could dress up like a bottle
So when I lost all my empathy in a bowl of brown decay
The traffic lights in your distorted bedroom, sustained now my brain is hurting like a rusty chain.

So tell me why Iâ€™m to blame for this eager to crush every inch of your body and soul.
Even though I was laughing when you fucked up my mind, drew the line to the hole in my head.
