Sometimes at Night

Jessica Lea Mayfield

i broke the little cabana boy's heart to let you fondle me in the dark one of those seedy outdoor motels in your bed swore i never would telli waited for the sun but it never came out now i'll never know what the fuss was about to watch it set over this mess that used to be a town you're the last one i thought i'd have my arms aroundsometimes at night our bodies collide
and i forget who i'm laying next toi did not ask to be born with these eyes eyes that always speak for my mind i thought i would come home alone but i brought all your habits into my homesometimes at night
our bodies collide
and i froget who i'm laying next to
laying next to
