You Are Not Your Friends

The Devoted Few

hey susan where's your head, did you lose it down the beach in the heat last night I heard you screaming red at the boys in their cars as they sped by and now you hold your breath as you write down the words on the walls tonight oh susie don't be deaf, can't you hear them, can't you feel them calling you outdoes it always feel the same - a little take a little gain are they knocking down your door - do you hide a little more and the beatings that you get - come only from regret oh susie can't you see I need youhey susan where's your dress, where's the girl with the heart that I once knew you are not your friends, you can't be left to your imagination can you I've never seen you so obsessed, I can feel it in your eyes you're so see through
oh susie don't be deaf, can't you hear them, can't you feel them calling you outdoes it always feel the same - a little take a little gain
and the beatings that you get - come only from regret oh susie can't you see I need you
