

Bridges Worth Burning

After The Sirens

One more rainy day serenade and i tend to fall apart when the summer shatters recklessly into masterpieces and melodies about the day she broke his heart into a million missing pieces...Well so much for the sunset, I tell myself the clouds would not be here if you were.
And so much for forever; forever's almost never what we make it out to be. One more ever-after will fade and our friendship falls apart when your letters yellow helplessly into folds and creases and memories about the day you broke his heart into a million missing pieces...So much for the sunset baby So much for forever maybe you never were, you never were to me...Well so much for the sunset I tell myself the clouds
would not be here if you were,
but you aren't, and they are and they would, but you won'tno, you won't...

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnlyrics.com/>