The Everlasting

Taproot

It's 8am and her blood's still warm the radio choke's out my favorite song i hear sirens, they sing along...through the walls my pulse is pumping to the beat outside a violent screaming rise and shine waves of helplessness reach to the sky...with heartbreak eyes and as the walls around come crashing down i ask myself how am i still around it's easy
it's beautiful
it's simple
the everlasting Sunday glow
i won't let you in don't push me away I turn the music up a little more trying to drown out what's in store there's a battle raging right outside my door...it's all over head downstairs

empty table
the tv glares
a criminal has been declared..beware
and as the walls around come crashing down
it's easy
it's simple
time and time and time again we seem to break before we bend
it's easy
it's simple
So don't push me away
