Bury the Hatchet

Lagwagon

I can't recall the hurting words that I once said
So long ago, still indignation clouds your head
And it's enough to know the pain of losing friends You perpetuate certain senseless hate and I can picture you today as you say "I used to know that guy"
And as you speak they watch your face split into two
And when you see me it's always hey Joe,
how is it goin' bro?
where have you been man?
We used to be such good friends
Two-faced you don't care
You know what you can do with it I can't pretend and you just want a war man and there you go again You ought to bury the hatchet and leave behind all the lies and your disguise
You know that I just want to
bury the hatchet
How much more will you permit?
Think about it you'll admit you a Am I really that bad?
Sometimes I second guess
Often times I wonder why my head is such a mess But put yourself in my shoes and picture if you can All these insecurities create that bitter sad man you see hurting
Not me
I forgive, I forget
I won't say the things that I'll regret Not this time
I will stop, but just between you and me it's a loss

Hypocrite
Don't give me that shit
