

Someone Else's Arms

Mae

Two days and I've not slept a wink with these thoughts that I've been thinking. This is the mark I aim to miss (again). You toss and turn, I lie awake. Who knows what I've been drinking. Another cheap, meaningless kiss (to give). From the beginning, dulled down and lost with all it's charm. I just want to wake up, wake up in someone's... I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. Six days and I can see the same brown eyes in this reflection. Is this man you say I'll be (become)? You toss and turn, I lie awake. Into the sand we're sinking. Holding us back from breathing free (I'm done). From the beginning, dulled down and lost with all it's charm. I just want to wake up, wake up in someone's... I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up. More than words, you keep to yourself. Like a curse that fares thee well. One man came. One truth to tell. All this blame. Hammers your way to hell. I've got a feeling It's not the safest place to start. This heavy breathing, it seems we're better off breaking hearts. From the beginning, dulled down and lost with all it's charm. I just want to wake up, wake up in someone's... I just want to wake up (I just want to wake up). I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up (I just want to wake up). I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up (I just want to wake up). I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up (I just want to wake up). I just want to wake up. I just want to wake up in someone else's arms
