

Sometimes Jacks Rule the Realm

311

Sometimes Jacks rule the realm
Can't you tell
Swimmers drown
Without a soundA chalkboard scratching sound
Could craze the town
An emperor's clothes
Never be exposedTook it as a compliment
Regardless what they meant
It could have been innocent
Spent, so spentRailing against undeserved
Dangling precipitants
Raining down idiots
Always flapping in the, flapping in the windI took it as a compliment
No matter what they meant
Could have been belligerent
Could have been half percentCould have been wanting
Afraid to been caught promising
Ended up taunting meI can't change that
I can't change
I can't change that
I can't changeI'm watchin' you
Not sure what's true
Life can be so cruel
There's nothing you can doBut it fades
Only to return
I feel your eyes burn
I really am concernedSometimes Jacks will rule the realm
Sometimes jealousy will dwell
You can't begin to dispel
When you can not even tellWhat makes me act the way I do
Why am I asking you
What makes me act the way I do
Why am I asking you
What makes me act the way I do
Why am I asking youSometimes Jacks will rule the realm
Sometimes jealousy will dwell
You can't begin to dispel
When you can not even tellSometimes Jacks will rule the realm
Sometimes jealousy will dwell

You can't begin to dispel
When you can not even tell

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnllyrics.com/>