

Blank Stare

Ninety Pound Wuss

Death is part of this pail second
Reacting in chaos with only moments to spare
 I'm still trying to figure the part
 I played in this game, my own demise
 How can we be reconciled from all this
 When repetition has no strength or value
 And all that I see is unappealing away
 So tempting, decadence nails me
 What risk and I taking for being alive
 The fear I confront from existance
 Carry me out now
 I need more than solitude
 Save me from myself deceiving
 Lies angry tears are choking me
 Forcing me down to my knees
 Hearts pure intentions are failing me
 Due to flesh in weakness
 Integrity lost a portion of myself
 Now drowning slowly
 Forsaking, waiting to begin, my dying time
 Burning from inside, wretched am I
 Weak and in doubt, I still suffer
 Go figure, I've never once budged an inch
 Even though from my heart I'm still trying
 Trying to see clear my vision
 It fails me, returning to nothing
 Demise, my own demise
