

Jane Hotel

Beau

I saw you in the corner at the Jane Hotel writing down some poetry on a paper coaster you were hiding your face under a hood, it was powdering snow, when I asked your name you gave me the look I didn't think I'd know so well today, I could show you so well how I fell.
Just gotta hold on to feelings like this before they expel, take me back to Arizona's canyon cage me in the moment, when you said you loved me. Hardly strangers anymore, you picked me up at the airport, more nervous than we'd ever been in our lives we took a deep breath, I saw you blink once- maybe twice, then I knew it was true you were real,
I could show you so well how I fell.
Just gotta hold on to feelings like this before they expel,
take me back to Arizona's canyon
