

Permanence

Air This Side of Caution

So much for your permanence
Sorry I wasn't much more than an accident
They'll wheel us both away
Despite all the healing here today

So much for my arrogance
I fell into the clutches of consequence
The meaning hasn't changed
Despite all the words you've rearranged

So much for our wonderland
There was so much in the air we didn't understand
We'll cry our wooden tears
With no idea of who is the puppeteer

I've been laying with my face in the ground
Waiting patiently to let the world down
Maybe if I'll tell you if I just see you around
I'll never let you down
I'll never ever let you down
