

Green Star

Pears

Garbed in misery, a mirror of my world, vomit still speckles my bib Lowly imps of pity swarm like buzzards in the sun
to lull me to sleep in my crib
I dream of you and then I dream of something else,
I lust to be lustful once more.
Recounting failures I have failed once again, the kismet I cannot ignore.
Inside of this crater I have combed for days for any small sliver, moments looped, replayed I wanted to save you,
I haven't the strength to save us both
I long to be near you, your ship is now miles out from my coast
I still get your messages, no flickers of light will bring you back, what was almost blinding fades slowly to black.
Alone, confused with a body I abused, silence, silenced by a monster in my place, defeat, passenger seat, driver steals my voice and wears my face I wanted to save you, I haven't the strength to save us both,
I long to be near you, your ship is now miles out from my coast,
I still get your messages,
they're useless but mean the world to me, recalling my mother, smiling down at the proud little boy I used to be This river runs higher,
to all I've ever desired,
I washed up on purpose,
drowning on the surface, in envy of what he became, a dying green star Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>