Reasons

Beth Crowley

You have the most beautiful smile. You light it up I can see you for miles, and if you stayed we could stand at the edge of forever. How it kills me you see you get hurt. You have no idea how much you're worth. I would pay anything for the courage to say that I love you. Tonight I want to dance with you, I'll reach for your hand, and convince you, you're not compleatly alone. Tell me what's broken, and I'll try to fix it. Just don't give up yet, this isn't the endign that you deserve. Life's unkind and it's taking it's toll, but I understand more then you know. Just look around and see everyone's faking perfection. We're all getting by fractured and bruised, to much pride to admit that we're confused but, I'm sure that I don't want a world you aren't in. Tonight, I want to dance with you I'll reach for your hand and convince you, you're not compleatly alone. Tell me reasons you think you should go. I'll give you the reasons you need to stay. Tonight I want to dance with you. I'll reach for your hand and convince you, you're not compleatly alone. Tell me wahts broken and I'll try to fix it. Just don't give up yet. This isn't the ending that you deserve.
