Changing

Jesse Bru

You fall apart each time you start to say goodbye
But there is nobody watching
(Nobody watching)
You've lost your grip, you start to slip but don't know why
And this is just the beginning
(Just the beginning)
You had the hopes to make it last, it's moving fast
And now you're realizing (Realizing)
That in the past, the dreams you had made people feel Like you were just reciting
(Just reciting)
Bathing in the afterglow
A chance at luck and pride
Where we end up, we can never know
And all I know is we seem to be
Changing, better to turn and walk away
Fading, all these lights just turn to gray
Changing, better to turn and walk away
But the strange thing is that I don't feel a thing
This is an act, stop holding back
The things you lost cannot replace what's missing
(Replace what's missing)
And from the start, you played the part
And now your heart's become a great deception
Bathing in the afterglow
A chance at luck and pride
Where we end up, we can never know
All I know is we seem to be
Changing, better to turn and walk away
Fading, all these lights just turn to gray
Changing, better to turn and walk away
But the strange thing is that I don't feel a thing
One last breath to say goodbye, I tell myself another lie
Stripped of all I hold so dear
The moment's lost, and I am sinking down lower
I drown myself in the water
And I am watching my life pass before my eyes
It comes as no surprise

You fall apart, and then you stop
You fall apart, and then you stop
You fall apart, and then you stop
Changing, better to turn and walk away
Fading, all these lights just turn to gray
Now I'm changing, better to turn and walk away
But the strange thing is that I don't feel a thing
You fall apart, and then you stop
You fall apart, and then you stop
You fall apart, and then you stop

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/