As Low as You Can Go

Earl Thomas Conley

(1st verse spoken)
I came home early this morning and she was gone
So I turned to the mirror
but the mirror seemed to sayDown in the valley
Across the city
Through the dark alleys
Filled with self-pity
Where people are victims of their own fearsHave you come down to the devil's table Drinking poison, 'til you're not able To see how your laughter has turned to tearsBoy you're as low as you can go
Left more than tracks along the road
Among the seeds that you have sown
There lies a man you should have knownBoy you're as low as you can go
Among the seeds that you have sown
There lies a man you should have knownBoy you're as low as you can go
Among the seeds that you have sown
There lies a man you should have known
