Beautiful When You Cry

Jason Rubero

No need to speak
The tears they say it all
Your transparent grief
Reveals the soul behind the wall

The years have made you complex
I can't understand, can't even begin
Then suddenly something hits you
And you're a little girl again

Strip down the ego
Raise up the white flag high
You're beautiful when you cry

Just got a message from a star that they call 'Serious'
If you show me your pain I swear that they won't call me
Delirious
But I'll pillar your frown
Lay your head down
I won't let you drown

Just got a message from a star that they call 'Serious'
If you show me your pain I swear they won't call me
Delirious
But I'll pillar your frown
Lay your head down
I won't let you drown in the libations of the sad...

The years have made you complex
I can't understand, can't even begin
Then suddenly something hits you
And you're a little girl again

And I could hold you
More for beauty than for pity
No one ever told me
That sorrow could lead to such swoon
And I'm over the moon

And it's unfathomable as the night sky

But you're beautiful
When you cry

You're beautiful when you cry
