

Winter

Noah Gundersen

All things pass with time
Old trends, old friends
Fitting for the month that Michael died
Buried in the stone cold riverbed
Where the water divides

And oh, come colder weather
Oh, come something better please

All things freeze with time
Clear skies, dry eyes
Am I colder than the air in this town?
I have been a stone cold riverbed
But still I am alive

Maybe someday
I said maybe, you'll forgive me

Because I've been a mayday son
I'm withered weather by the setting sun of your summer
If I could be anyone these days
I'd be someone different
So I could hold you now

You slip away like a changing maple leaf
I try to find any dry land that I can
For the last time though I have loved you
You keep slipping away, slipping away
And I am finished with

All the chaos and the ticking clock
The college life, the bombs that drops
And blows the whole damn thing to bits
And freezing are my fingertips in this cold
In this cold, cold town

We make such different people
Climbing into different beds at night
We're both such different feelings
Mine are overwhelming, are yours?

I might be screaming while
You're dreaming without any concern
And it took so long for me to find
That I can't try anymore

And If I said I'm sorry too many times before
It's cause I just wanted desperately
To make you love me
Darling, if the sun keeps shining
Brighter than all your distractions
I will climb on into hell
And light myself on fire.
