Painted Skies

Crimson Glory

When she's sad the world is lonely Silver clouds are crying only For the pain she feels So deep insideThe love she thought would save her Has somehow now enslaved her To a dream she thought she wanted To come trueSpread your wings, you can fly But the dove is never free In painted skies that shade the color Of your dreamOnly nightmares are real Confusion conceals the only reason For the feelings you can't hideWhen she smiles, the world it shines But the silver clouds are only there To hide the distant storm That's coming soonThe love she let surround her Has become the waves that drown her In the sea of ever changing warmth and coldSpread your wings, you can fly But the dove is never free In painted skies that shade the color Of your dreamOnly nightmares are real Confusion conceals the only reason For the feelings you can't hide You can flySpread your wings, you can fly But the dove is never free In painted skies that shade the color Of your dreamWhen the nightmares ensue All that you can do is paint your sky Another brighter shade of blueSpread your wings, you can glide Above the violent storms that plague your life
