

Save That Pillow

Caitlin Crosby

Lights down, feet wet.
He tells you all the words so you feel fed.
Sparks fly, just in your head.
You think you're what he wants so you let him into your bed.
Lights down and clothes off, you do the deed to keep him around and you're praying you won't hear the sound of your door closing cause he's got places to go.
And you wait around til he never shows
And he will never remember.
And he will never call.
Oh, so get down to the bottom of why you're giving yourself away and save that pillow for someone who will love you the right way, who will love you the right way
Morning comes, you cover up.
Your mind's spinning around in circles cause you'll never be enough for his unquenchable, this fine disease to get as many women on their knees
And he will never remember.
And he will never call.
Oh, so get down to the bottom of why you're giving yourself away and save that pillow for someone who will
love you the right way
You're miles and miles and miles away, so don't you call that love you made.
Memories of him will fade and I know you got it in you cause you got the right stuff, baby.
You got the right stuff, darling.
Yeah, he didn't know the first thing about you
Oh, and he will never remember and he will never call.
Oh, so get down to the bottom of why you're giving yourself away and save that pillow for someone who will
love you the right way
