

I Have Fought A Measureless Battle

Our Last Night

She closes her eyes,
Yet tries to look around
There's nothing to hear,
There's nothing to see
She's all alone and no matter what
This cannot be changed
This cannot be changed

The shadows she chases may lead her in Different directions

But she's unable to move
The place she once tried to dream of is still there
But she no longer tries

Everything she once had is now only everything
She once forgot

In her mind
This reality fails
To reveal itself
(day by day she repeats to herself just how much she has done)
Just how much she has done
And eventually
Her perception becomes a hope
That brushes the empty canvas
She is waiting in
(but this picture)
But this picture is not sincere
Picture is not sincere

Everything she once had is now only everything
She once forgot

And the shades of gray
Reveal the fragile hope
That this scene was built of

Words can bring her back
But it's hard when she's not listening

Silence can bring her back
But only if she knows it's not here

Time can bring her back
But it goes so slowly without her...
