

Waiting Under the Waves

Kris Delmhorst

I'm losing my faith again, losing my open hand
Losing my how and why, losing my great divide
And in this world where we are, who can say what's going too far?
You punch out the windows baby, I slash all the tires I'm feeling that undertow, like maybe it's time to go
It's getting so sick and thin, getting right under my skin
And in this song that we sing, who could ever point to one thing?
You are still in hiding baby, I am still on fire Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves to be saved
And I am sorry that we're sinking but we're sinking just the same I'm losing my faith in you, losing my balance too
How does it get so wrong, how can it all take so long
And in this time that we live, who could find a way to give a damn
That we are drowning in two separate stormy seas? Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves to be saved
And I am sorry that we're sinking but we're sinking just the same Darling, don't you ever wonder if we two could both slip under?
Learn to sink and learn to swim and breathe again, and breathe again All these tears that we cry
Who can say if we will live or die
Stand or fall, live in love or none at all? Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
Waiting under the waves
