Kay D. Smith

No matter what color
We're all guilty of prejudice
No one cares about the children
No one cares about the future We better realize our differences
Because deep inside we're all the same
(The time for change is now before we all self destruct) If the place where you came from is so superior
How would you know if you've never been there
There's nothing wrong with pride of heritage
Just remember your kind is not the only one Ignorance and hatred going hand in hand
Making you believe that you're the greater
Number tension all around you, staring you in the face
Turn the fire down before the pot boils over
