

Hope and Glory

The Four Seasons

Summer night young love came calling,
was as strong as a hurricane.
Nothing could stop their love from falling,
with each other they felt no shame. She had a dream about tomorrow,
he swore to God he'd make it come true.
Nobody told him about the sorrow,
all the storms they'd be going through. It's the same old story, as the time goes by,
of the hope and glory in a young man's eyes.
Just when it all gets easy someone tears your heart out. Sometimes you damn-well better give up before you even start out. Is it too late to find the "great American dream"
when it all unwinds? So, she's taking the kids to school now, and he's working his life away. Where is that happy ever-after, what happened to yesterday? Now they're saving their every penny.
Their kids will be what they couldn't be... nothing less than extraordinary, a new aristocracy. It's the same old story, as the time goes by,
of the hope and glory in a young man's eyes.
Just when it all gets easy someone tears your heart out. Sometimes you damn-well better give up before you even start out. Is it too late to find the "great American dream"
when it all unwinds? She had a dream about tomorrow,
he swore to God he'd make it come true.
Nobody told him about the sorrow,
all the storms they'd be going through. It's the same old story, as the time goes by,
of the hope and glory in a young man's eyes. (as the time) as the time goes by...
(as the time) as the time goes by...
(its the hope) its the hope and glory...
(as the time) as the time goes by...
(as the time) as the time goes by...
(all the hope) as the time goes by...
(its the hope) its the hope and glory...
(as the time) as the time goes by.
