

Cinders

Sarah Blasko

Slow falling whispers on pricked up ears
Slow burning cinders, three long years between
When we lit them in so much haste
High hazard seasons, houses laid to waste
Did you forget it all? Do you listen when I call?
These fire trails lead north and slowly back in time
Slowly back in time, slowly back in time
Time has its reasons for letting go
Comes as it pleases, this new growth beneath
Where the branches are cracked and bowed
Covers the feelings, these old scars still show
Did you forget it all? Do you listen when I call?
These fire trails lead north and slowly back in time
Slowly back in time
If only I could have escaped
Without turning back to take Things that I could have replaced
You just can't return to these days
Did you forget it all? Do you listen when I call?
These fire trails lead north and slowly back in time
Slowly back in time, slowly back in time
