

We Own the Night

Matthew Morrison

Where is the light in all this darkness all at once I've lost my way.
Lined in with pain far from the innocence I'll never find again.
Time is the fire in which we all burn time that is lost in every page that I turn When we are apart I feel the isolation for your heart beat is my affirmation need you under my skin and in the that air I breathe To wake alone without you is too hard to conceive
When we are apart there is only desolation nothing seems to work it only frustration
The sun will soon be rising but still out of sight tomorrow is too far away till then we own the night I follow thee as it is followed from the sky, now way too fast
I try to deny the new day dawning just to make each moment last Time is the chill that creeps on the skin freezing my heart and my soul from within
when we are apart I feel
the isolation for your heart beat
To wake alone without you is too hard to conceive
When we are apart there is only desolation
only frustration
The sun will soon be rising but still out of sight
tomorrow is too far away
till then we own the night
Time is the fire in which we all are burning tonight Time which is flying can't stop the world from turning we own the night
we own the night
hold me close hold me tight
we own the night

when we are apart I feel
the isolation for your heart beat is my affirmation need you under my skin and in the air that I breathe
To wake alone without you is too hard to conceive
When we are apart there is only desolation
only frustration
The sun will soon be rising but still out of sight
tomorrow is too far away
till then we own the night.
