

Casey's Song

I Am The Avalanche

Casey needs a holiday
To say the least.
From his broken bones,
A holiday.

When's his turn to walk this planet
Safe from all the doctors
And also from himself?

They can't believe he lives and breathes.

We think maybe he's a saint. And he steers his ship steady, slowly.

He just wants to get it ahead
Regardless of nature's obstacles.

Catch your breath, kid.
Grab a hold.
Don't let go again.

We'll laugh about this when we're old.

This pain was heaven sent God, I need a holiday

To say the least
From this bashed in heart,
A holiday.

Where's my friends to
Dig me the fuck up out this deep rut
And focus on the dream we
Had five years ago today?

I guess it's time to believe And I steer my ship steady, slowly.

I just wants to feel human
In tune with all of nature's obstacles.

I sat in my car, staring at the coins laying on the floor
Asking am I cursed or just secretly iron man?

Did it get away from you?
How do I get it back to me?

I sat in my car wondering how things got this far.

Get home alive.

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.