When You're Gone

Hanson

Well I just can't seem to beat it,
Cause my heart's too numb to feel,
And your smile does all the talking,
And the pain is all that's real,
The way that you keep screaming,
I can hardly hear to think,
And I feel the bridges are burning,
Underneath my feetWhere do you go when you're gone?
Where do you go when you're gone?
Oh how the road feels so long,
Where do you go when you're gone?Well I just want to stay dreaming,
And I just don't want to wake,
Why can't we keep on sailing across the same old lake,
My forehead is still bleeding from the thorns I used to wear,
And I'm left alone and I'm beaten,
But this cross I choose to bearWhere do you go when you're gone?
Where do you go when you're gone?
Oh how the road feels so long,
Where do you go when you're gone?Well I finally found what I'm looking for,
Though the road's still long and the night's still full,
But I finally found what I'm looking for,
Well I finally found what I'm looking for,
Though the road's still long and the night's still full,
I finally found what I'm looking forThe voices fall like timber and the fear it pulls like rain,
And my heart is crushed to cinders underneath this kind of pain,
But there is no resolution when the revolution's there,
So I'm left with no solution, but the voices in my headWhere do you go when you're gone?
Where do you go when you're gone?
Oh how the road feels so long,
Where do you go when you're gone?
