

Black Blood

Jessie Baylin

I was strong enough to say I've done you wrong
You were strong enough to stay and hold my head
Where the sky turned a phase and the ocean turned to black blood
And we knew there was no way it'd be the sameWhen the priests had all gone home, I would drink holy water
But it didn't do a thing to save my soul
And I know you feel the same but were too afraid to say
So you write it in the book under your bedI feel the ache when you're gone
I feel the ache when you're gone
I feel the ache when you're at home
I feel the ache when you're at home
Well I saw it in your face and I tried to love the lines
But it my broke my heart in words I could not say
So let's try to find a place where the ocean's not black blood
And the sun will always burn for you and I
I feel the ache when you're gone
I feel the ache when you're gone
I feel the ache when you're at home
I feel the ache when you're at homeBut everybody knows a storm
Everybody knows the storm
With broken ships on broken shores

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlrics.com/>