Inga Marchand, also known as rapper Foxy Brown
Was taken to a local hospital today, when the Range Rover
She was driving spun out of control at a Brooklyn side street
Although she was not seriously injured, Marchand was later arrested
For driving with a suspended license, this is just another in a long list
Of offenses that have plagued this Brooklyn rap star Yeah, I know it's been a long time since y'all heard my voice
Maybe what, 2, 3, years or somethin', been up and down
Been high and low, even been at the point of no return, but no hope
Just want to let my fans know that I'm still here, y'all holla back
The sound was broken, too many years being political
It's kinda hard to do when everything you're seeing is critical
Is all my fault what they said in the news
But it's funny how the public seems to get it confused
They act like they ain't got nothin' better to do
All they want is a statement, the hattin' is blatin'
But we never paid attention to those who hate us
'Til my face was on the cover of all the local papers
But still un-phased, I kept my cool
Plottin', carefully, every step I choose
And my, Cool-whit poin, and my write finery
Everybody wanna know my side of the story
Well, here it is, the whole truth, plain and simple

This'll finally explain all the pain I've been through
And in no way shape or form of my provoked violence
Please try to understand my broken silence
Seems like everybody's on my back
Seems like everybody's on my back
