

This Time

Moderat

When I was dead asleep
behind
towering walls They built a world outside and I missed the wake-up call My stony breath crawled to glory heavens be there was a sea of sound
But it was silence that stole my sleep When I was dead asleep
behind
and I missed the wake-up call When I break cripple legs Through long winding streets
Fill me with suffering
And the people Would see right through me
