

Strange Transmissions

Norah Jones

I believe, you say
Don't think, we'll stay
Drawn through the ebb
Lost in the flow Beneath my breath, I confess
My world, loved less
The devil held the proof
For me to know I could only fight
For the longest while
But with the truth out, baby
I belong to you I stoop to find
My place, entwined
I took it to the bottom
One more time I could only fight
For the longest while
But with the truth out, baby
I belong to you I could trip and I want you to know
That every time I think
That I think I should go
I receive strange transmissions I could trip and I want you to know
That every time I think
That I think I should go
I receive strange transmissions I could only fight
For the longest while
But with the truth out, baby
I belong to you I could trip and I want you to know
That every time I think
That I think I should go
I receive strange transmissions I could trip and I want you to know
Every time I think
That I think I should go
I receive strange transmissions

Songwriters

Peter N Malick Published by

KOCH ENTERTAINMENT MUSIC PUBLISHING Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941.
Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>