How You Made Them Feel

Your words can often fail to sell
The nuance of emotions you try to speak so well
Your actions are to speak louder than your words
But somehow all the doing, doing, doing just donâ€™t take away the hurt

They wonâ€™t remember everything you did
They wonâ€™t remember everything you said
But their heart it wonâ€™t forget and theyâ€™ll always remember
How you made them feel

You know your smile can cut right through the thickest heart
It canâ€™t take away a lousy day but itâ€™s a heck of a good start
Itâ€™s not the cards that you send or the money that you lend or the standard response
Itâ€™s the sharing of the silences, the dropping of the differences, and forgiveness

How you made them feel, the unmistakable light in your eyes
How you made it real, everything a little larger than life
How you made them feel so strong
When their weakened little heart couldnâ€™t go on

Itâ€™s the slowing down and listening to a heart that speaks from honesty
Itâ€™s part of the great emancipation, disassociation from the separate lives we lead
Because the essence of the question, isnâ€™t it all about connection, the mark we leave
Because long after youâ€™re gone, your feeling lives on and on and on and on and on

They wonâ€™t remember everything you did
They wonâ€™t remember everything you said
But their heart it wonâ€™t forget and theyâ€™ll always remember
How you made them feel
